Notarial Academic Training Course

Law Training Centre is the Faculty Office of the Archbishop of Canterbury's (FOAC) preferred provider of the Notarial Academic Training Course stage, with the second stage (Notarial Practice Course) being delivered by UCL.

FOAC is the legal regulator of the Notarial profession, and with its origins in the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533, it is the oldest and most established legal regulator in the world.

A Notary is a qualified lawyer whose work is recognised internationally, unlike the work of Solicitors. The primary function of a Notary therefore, is the preparation of documents and the authentication of clients' identities and signatures principally for use abroad.

Why Study with Law Training Centre?

Law Training Centre is the UK's first fully accredited training provider to offer every major route to qualifying. Our flexible online courses allow our learners the chance to balance their study schedule and their career, meaning that they can develop their skillset and earn new qualifications without having to leave the workforce.

Our online by design approach to learning works for both employers and employees. We know that because we've already trained thousands of lawyers, working closely with their firms to achieve the optimal outcome for both.

Law Training Centre is trusted by over 700 law firms, from the Magic Circle to leading regional and family run firms, who benefit from a flexible approach that enables them to upskill staff and train future lawyers. Additionally, Law Training Centre is chosen by a broad spectrum of other organisations to boost their in-house expertise including energy companies, government bodies and financial services.
